ARE YOU TRYING TO ADMINISTER A DECEASED PERSONS ESTATE?

DO YOU NEED ASSISTANCE APPOINTING A PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE FOR PROBATE COURT?

LINNELL & ASSOCIATES CAN HELP!

When a person passes away, a personal representative might need to be assigned to administer the deceased probate court.

Probate is the process which proves that the will of a deceased person is legitimate so their property can be transferred to beneficiaries of the will. The first part of the legal process of transferring the estate is resolving any and all claims from any contesters. Of course, with any legal proceeding, there are technical aspects to probate administration which is where we can provide our services.

When you open probate estate in court, either a Guardian or Conservator will need to be appointed. A guardian is a person who is given responsibility for the well-being of an adult who lacks sufficient understanding to make informed decisions. A conservator is a person who is given responsibility over the assets "estate" of an adult who is unable to effectively manage their property. Linnell & Associates can help!
